ONE BRAVE MAN.

The Reason Why He Stood Firm While

Others Took To Their Heels. The Randall is the rendezvous of the best story tellers in Vermont, with out a doubt. Some of the all-wool-ayard-wide-warranted-not-to-rip-rustor-run-the-color"'pon my word" trutales there related during the past few weeks have appeared in NEWS AND CITIZEN. None, however, have been more interesting than one told by a veteran of the civil war, the other evening. It follows:

A battalion of volunteer infantry was drilling in a field when a regiment of regular cavalry rode by. The colonel of the cavalry halted his men to watch the volunteers, and, getting into conversation with the colonel of the latter, he criticised their drill unfavorably, especially their want of steadiness. The volunteer colonel was a fierce fellow, and he cried hotly, "My men are as steady as any regiment of regulars."

"I do not think so," retorted the cavalryman, "and if you'll draw your men in order to receive cavalry I'll prove

The challenge was accepted, and the cavalrymen charged down upon the citizen soldiers, who awaited them in the usual way. Now, regular cavalry can charge to within a few feet or even inches of infantry at full gallop and then at the word of command pull up short. The volunteers, however, lost their nerve when they saw the huge horses thundering down upon them and showing no sign of stopping when a few yards off. They fied, all but one man, who remained on his knee, with bayonet leveled.

His colonel, enraged at the others' flight, approached the hero and, tapping him on the back, cried: "You are the only brave man in the regiment. You scorned to run."

"Yes, sir," gasped the hero. "I had my fut stuck in a hole, or I shouldn't have waited."- --

More About Mark Twain.

Mark Twain is still alive and up to his old tricks of amusing his audiences by original sparkles of wit. He presided at the Lincoln memorial exercises in New York and this is how he introduced Henry Watterson of Kentucky, whom he characterized as "the eminent journalist, statesman, orator, political leader, rebel-and what is better, a reconstructed onealways loyal to his convictions, right or wrong.

"I, myself, was born in a slave state," said the humorist, "and my father was a slave owner. I was a second lieutenant in a Confederate regiment for a time, and if Cotonel Watterson had obeyed by orders I should have succeeded in my great enterprise. It was my intention to drive General Grant into the Pacific -if I could get transportation. I told Colonel Watterson to surround the Eastern armies and to wait until I

"But he was insubordinateland refused to take orders from a second lieutenant and as a result the Union was saved. Ladies and gentlemen. this is the first time the secret has ever been told. There sits the man.

"It was Watterson who thus saved the Union, and, gentlemen," said the humorist, lowering his voice to a sepulchrel stage whisper, "up to this day, up to this very hour, that man gets no government pension. This is the way we treat the men who save the Union for us.

"But the old wounds are healded. We are again brothers. You testify to that by inviting us conspicuous rebels to talk to you on such an occasion, and we testify to it by coming here to pay our tribute to the memory of the immortal Lincoln.'

When Abraham Lincoln died in '65 there was deep and universal griet and sorrow throughout the north, while the people of the south publicly rejoiced because they thought that in Lincoln's death they had lost their chief enemy. The interval of thirtyfive years that has elapsed since enables the people of all sections to see with clearer vision and to judge the characters of men at their real worth. Lincoln, like Washington, can stand the most searching test. He was an | well until they are 80 years old. earnest, noble man, a sincere unselfish patriot with no guide but conscience and no higher ambition than to do his whole duty by his fellow man and by his country. Even the people of the south recognize his worth now and almost vie with the rest of the world in honoring his memory. The country is fortunate, indeed, in baving such names upon its honor roll as those of Washington and Lincoln and it is only fitting that the birthday of each should be set apart to be observed and commemorated by the entire nation. Especially valuable will it be if a study of the lives and characters of these great men stimulates the present generation to pattern after their virtues and to follow their noble examples of exalted patriotism.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

Their True Position in the Community and Their Value To the Public.

The rightly conducted local newspaper contributes more to the well being of its community than any other private enterprise and is second in importance to the people to no public institution unless it be the public school, writes E. P. Harrison in Newspaper-

Much of a trivial nature may appear in the local paper, but the fact remains that the local news, in the broadest sense, is the solvent which blends the varying elements of local life into an organic whole. To the vast majority of people local doings are more important than the doings of the state and nation. Next to the family, the most important unit is the local community. The local newspaper that records all of the local happenings, tendencies and developments that are of interest to the people has performed a very important service. If, in addition to this, the editor construes and comments on the more important matters in a way to reflect the best sentiments of the people, he contributes a factor to local life the value of which cannot be overestimated.

The editor still further places the town under obligations to him if, from study of the life and doings of other communities, he is able to make suggestions for the local welfare.

The local paper should reflect local sentiments. The reader is more interested to know what many think about local questions than to know what one editor thinks. Local opinions are interesting local news. The editor who has the ability and is in touch with the community so as to conduct a paper on these lines has a hold upon the people which not only gives him an honorable and dignified position, but should, with good business management, make him an adequate income and a valuable property.

Almost as important to the community and more important to the treasury is the management of that part of the paper which is paid for by the authornamely, the advertising. It should be borne in mind that advertising today is not an optional matter, but the only means by which goods can be distributed to the best advantage of buyers and the greatest profit to the merchant. It is an improved merchandising machine that enables the buyer to get what he wants at least trouble and expense and the dealer to do a much larger business with a given plant to his advantage and profit.

While the space occupied by the advertiser is paid for by the merchant, it is the privilege and duty of the editor to make the matter as interesting and valuable as possible to the reader. A useful suggestion in the advertising columns adds as much to the attractiveness of the paper to the reader as though it appeared in the news columns. It can almost be laid down as a rule that the more fresh, interesting and helpful the advertising columns are made to the reader the more benefit the advertiser will derive from the paper and the more he will pay for the use of the paper.

Success in conducting a local paper depends, first, upon the right conception of the highest utility of the paper. With this view of the office of the local paper there will be no seeking of temporary sensations, no deceiving headings, for the newspaper man will realize that the value of his paper to reader and advertiser alike rests on confi-

There will be no begging of advertising "to belp the paper," for the attitude of soliciting advertising for the profit of the advertiser will be recognized as the more effective as well as the more dignified.

In short, a conception of the true, position of the local newspaper will place its conductor in the social position he should occupy and his bank balance on a footing of independence, Wealth's Beginning.

Wealth begins in a tight roof that keeps the rain and wind out; in a good pump that yields you plenty of sweet water; in two suits of clothes, so as to change your dress when you are out; in dry sticks to burn; in a good double wick lamp and in three meals.—Emerson

WHAT'S IN A NAME? (Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. They were as stable as gold; their price did not vary a cent in twenty years. The very name of Oliver Ames & Son, was a synonym for honesty. It was current all over the world.

On the same principle Benson's Porous Plaster is the universal standard external remedy. To say it is a "good" plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external rem-edy is available, Benson's Plaster is used almost as a matter of course.

Benson's Plaster quickly relieves and cures where other modes of treatment are either exasperatingly slow or have no good effect whatever. Coughs, colds, lumbago, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lame back, etc., are at once benefited and soon cured.

Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters have none of the curative virtues of Benson's. More than 5,000 physicians and druggists have commended Benson's Plaster as a remedy in which the public may have implicit confidence; while, in a comparative test with other plasters, Benson's has received fifty-fice highest awards. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations. For sale by all druggists or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

FASHION'S FRILLS.

Oddments of the Hour In Gold, Tin

sel, Velvet. Lace and Fur. Gold braid tinsel trimmings and the little ferrets and alguillettes which finish our velvet and silk ties give the necessary touches of gold to everyday dress. Never was there a time when so many pretty chiffons and little accessories were needed to complete a fashionable toilet as at the present

In the cut some beautiful transparent sleeves of ecru point de venise lace are shown; they are trimmed with narrow black ribbon velvet, and have puffs of finely tucked white chiffon at the wrists, with pointed puffs of chiffon extending over the hands. A pretty pair of the undersleeves which are now so fashionable is also shown

CRIC ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

They are made of fine creamy lace, and have pointed cuffs of transparent lace, edged with a double row of gold tinsel braid.

Another figure shows a folded neckband of creamy lace, with a bow of narrow ribbon velvet on the left side. The ends of the velvet are finished off with small gold buttons. Another folded neckband has a tie of ribbon velvet with pointed gilt ends.

As already said, accessories are indispensable, and particularly the little scarfs and ties, the choux of velvet or crape, and velvet tabs and adornments, which are seen on all fashionable toilets. In fact, our bodices seem strewn with odds and ends, from the fussiness of lace and the jingling ferrets on ribbon to the many charms, seals and pendants which swing on our chains

Exquisite are the new galons and trimmings in applique form, but gold and silver tinsel in combination with colored velvet is the newest idea and most charming in faced cloth or handsome chine silk.

The heavier makes of lace, such as duchesse, bruges point and the becoming renaissance lace, are distinctly pop ular, and the godet collars are newer than the flat type and can be worn in various styles.

The favorite decoration for a lace bodice or blouse is a chou arrangement of crape or bebe velvet with ends, the velvet in loops, the crape tucked or fringed. Huge single blossoms set in rosettes of tulle or chiffon are used, the colors reproduced in long velvet or ribbon streamers falling to the edge of the gown The black lace robe, with applications of white lace disposed as a garniture, is quite the new idea for this type of gown and can be worn over black or white.

Flat, short haired furs are greatly in favor this season, and, as fur is now used for coats, for turndown collars and yokes, a bushy or long baired fur would be impossible. Very narrow bands of sable, mink and of brown skunk are used on bandsome evening gowns of velvet and silk, and flat collars and wide revers of ermine are popular on long evening coats.

About Milk.

Milk is said to be a perfect food, but in no sense a beverage and should never be used as such. For some invalids it supplies all that is necessary for sustenance and in this respect dif fers from beef tea, which does not nourish, but only stimulates, although many people still foster the delusion that it affords both nutriment and strength. A very little milk, if it agrees with the individual, is of more real value than a large quantity of beef ten. Again, cocoa and chocolate, made with milk, form a rich, heavy food, but certainly not a drink.
